

Write the title of your essay here.

Feelings of exuberance and blissfulness ~~fills~~^{fill} me, as I hear the fixed beat of the ~~cities~~^{city's} heart, reverberating around the city. My eyes, as far as I could see were once throbbing archeries of metropolis snaking around as exquisite of white tapestry of mist engulfed the town. The town is a fountain, breathing, alive. The fountain is our education, our guide and our stepping stone. We must treat our town with esteem and ~~its~~^{it's} our moral duty to make the right choices not only for us, but the society also.

merge these two into a single paragraph.

And so there has been a debate going on, whether for our benefits, we should get a shopping mall or community centre.

Human greed and folly has kept our cherished community from advancing, due to ~~peoples~~^{people's} toxic mentality for profit. Shopping malls are exploits, serving the owners of the shop for money. Shopping malls are puppet masters, controlling and corrupting ~~peoples~~^{people's} minds. It is quite straightforward that we must empower our society to invest ~~for~~ a community centre rather than a shopping mall.

It is crucial that we build a community centre for the power of culture. Community centres support those from a range of ~~background~~^{backgrounds}. For a while, racism has been affecting our humane world with black people rejected because of their skin colour. It is vitally significant for us to build a centre so that we can treat others with respect and help those with a different background.

Community centres build a society without ~~contradicts~~^{contradiction} and controversy. For far too long human avarice and imprudence has separated our society. Community centres build a strong bond with each other and ~~helps~~^{help} socialise with those who you've never met. Socialising is an important part of our lives as it staves off lonely feelings and ~~sharpen~~^{sharpens} our memory. You will also learn to have faith in others around you and let others confine you. As Helen Keller said, "Alone we can do so little; together we can do so much." This means as a society and community, we can do a lot more than one person by themselves.

We should ~~scrutinise~~^{scrutinise} the power of health and ~~haleness~~^{healness}. Community centres aid those who ~~needs~~^{need} help, and will assist anyone who is physically or emotionally hurt. Injuries kill 3.16 million people every year. When there is a community centre, they will help them get better as well as reducing the amount of death and injuries around the world. There are only 1000 community centres in Australia, meaning we should invest ⁱⁿ ~~for~~ community centres ^{rather than} ~~then~~ shopping malls.

While some may argue, there ^{is} ~~are~~ more essential ^{equipment} ~~equipments~~ in shopping malls and entertainment, I strongly believe health is more important and we should empower to invest for a community centre than a shopping mall.

^{It's} ~~Its~~ a call of unity as ^{it's} ~~its~~ our moral duty to save the world. It is discernible to invest for a community centre ^{than} ~~then~~ a shopping mall. restate your points in the conclusion.

Mark:

This is a good essay. However, there are issues that need to be addressed. First of all, only write a single paragraph for the introduction. Meanwhile, in your body section, there are a lot of errors in subject verb agreement and word choice. When the subject is singular, make the verb in singular form, too. If plural, use the plural form of the verb. Then, be very careful with your word choice, you have written scrutiny instead of scrutinise. Lastly, your conclusion is ineffective. Restate the points that were made in the body section there, and add the call to action in the last sentence. Use novel and new words here to keep the interest of the readers.
