

Part 2

Our insatiable hunger for food has led us to killing and gruesomely meaning beautiful animals that should be left to roam the earth. We have been sending animals to slaughter houses slaughterhouses without a further thought of whether they would like it if they were in the animals' shoes. Knives flash like a blur, quickly moving on to the next victim while they are packaging the meat. Why Why would we live a lifestyle enjoying this repulsive food? We only raise animals to just send them to the butchers to get chopped to death. Why should we continue this practice? Injustice is calling and we must solve this crisis. I firmly believe we should all adopt a vegan lifestyle. Firstly it wastes material on growing animals, is cruel to animals and also encourages animal rights on as a whole. It also causes less climate change and other side effects. I would like to explain my reasoning behind these points.

Animals raised to just get be slaughtered for meat don't get raised for free. It takes lots of water, food and land to raise even just one cow or pig. If everyone adopted a vegan lifestyle, the world could save millions of dollars worth of water, grass and food, shelter and land. We all want animals to be nice and plump to eat, but that just wastes more materials. We could avoid all of that just by growing vegetables and meat alternatives. You only need to water plants, and it is not as much as meat which needs requires about 10,000 litres for a kilo, while plants only need 500 litres for a kilo of something like wheat. It is also not like Freshwater grows out of trees, so we will be conserving our materials for more efficient ways to sustain ourselves.

A Vegan lifestyle means we won't be cruel to animals. Animals are sentenced to slaughterhouses only for that purpose. By being vegan, you are supporting animal rights on a whole, from banning zoos to just better general treatment for animals. If you are still consuming meat, you are just implying that you support slaughtering animals and you think it should continue because you can enjoy it. This means you are not only supporting killing animals, but other things like banning battery farming or inhumane treatment of animals. We cut animals' throats while they lifelessly stare at them, in shock of our betrayal. Isn't this too cruel to animals killed just for our insatiable greed?

By not being vegan, you are supporting this practice that requires malevolent and inhumane ways to obtain food. An aftermath of this is a lack of water, from feeding animals, and a lack of trees and forests because we create plains for imprisoned animals to roam. Trees are completely chopped down just for animals like cows or pigs to eat and graze. This is a huge factor in climate change and could be very bad if it keeps increasing in popularity. In the future, it will be the main source of emissions, but authorities will not try to save the earth since it is too late. We should definitely stop this practice for the greater good.

To conclude, the side effect of slaughterhouses and killing animals to get meat is unseen. If we don't adopt a vegan lifestyle, it will be too late in the future, and we will have even more strange animals, other than the common cow, pig, chicken and sheep. We must remember our moral duty to protect these animals and use the simplest solution that people are turning a blind eye to. You can help by at least supporting RSCPA-approved meats but trying to avoid eating meat in general.

This persuasive essay is well-structured and makes a convincing argument in favour of veganism. You could use effective persuasive techniques, such as providing evidence to support your claims; however, it would improve your output if you also cite statistics, and make an emotional appeal. In addition, you were able to effectively use figurative language to create vivid imagery that helps readers connect with the subject matter.

The essay could be improved by adding more sophisticated language and better use of vocabulary throughout to engage the reader further emotionally, consider adding metaphors which can evoke empathy from your audience. Additionally, it would benefit from restructuring certain sentences to make them flow better while also increasing clarity; some sections feel somewhat clunky due to awkward phrasing and a lack of transitions between ideas. Please consider my suggestions and errors highlighted above to improve your output!
