

As the stage lights flashed on and off, Grace was getting ready to go on stage. She thought that this would be a night that everyone ~~would~~ would remember. Tonight was going to be history. The vermillion curtains flung open, leaving the little girl on the stage alone. The audience whispered quietly among each other. Hatred faces were shown by a number of people. ^{You can elaborate this part more.} Grace knew what was going on. Will this problem be the toughest challenge she had to face in her journey? Racism has always been a hard part of Grace's life. She will not allow it to stop her from being a jazz singer.

Note:

The work is fine but the sentences can still be expanded to give more details about the scene. It would be better for the work to deliver the setting clearly to allow the readers to have a vivid imagination on what you want them to see through reading. Other than that, check for typos before submitting.

Keep going!
Marks (47/50)