

I can contribute to this school because I am a helpful person. I am compassionate and empathetic and I will help peers in need. This is because I struggle as I go between my days, but I want to help others go through the same experiences. This can be simple things, like needing a glue stick or not having anyone to play with at recess. I want to help people in these situations because I understand it's not very fun to be in those circumstances and I simply want them to be happier. For example, once, someone in my class lost their handball in the bushes. I helped them find the ball, as I understand how sad it can be to lose it. Luckily, after quite a long time we found the ball. Another time, I helped a student with a maths worksheet. I explained the problem to him, and I helped him understand. I want to help people to face their problems and see that they come through because I always have empathy for people experiencing issues. I want to make a difference in the lives of others and help them to the best of my ability. I am also a good team worker. I can work easily in a team with others, and I can combine our ideas. I also know how to problem-solve, as problems always come up in our daily lives and it is inevitable that we come across issues. However, I am a good problem-solver and I can solve these issues that come across our daily lives. I am flexible with my ideas that I can work in a team. For example, once we were doing a research project in a group and my team disagreed on what to do, but I managed to integrate the ideas and make it a combined strategy. These characteristics make it easy for me to work in a team. I am also a good leader. I can instruct others well and I also listen to others' suggestions. I integrate both my and others' opinions. I was in the school SRC team once, and I worked hard to help my school. I know how to collaborate and direct people which is a crucial role of being a leader. This helps me contribute to this school.
