

Section 1:

#1 (Role model paragraph): a. Strengths:

- Clear identification of a role model
- Brief explanation of why Eddie Woo is admirable

b. Weakness: Lack of depth Your explanation of why Eddie Woo is your role model lacks detail and personal connection. You mention that he was bullied and became famous, but you don't explore how this specifically inspires you or relates to your own experiences. For instance, you state "He then helped students who were left out or alone in his school," but don't explain how this impacts you or why you find it admirable.

c. Exemplar: "Eddie Woo's journey from a bullied student to a renowned mathematician resonates with me deeply. His dedication to helping isolated students at Cherrybrook High School inspires me to be more inclusive and supportive of my peers."

#2 (Ethical dilemma paragraph): a. Strengths:

- Provides a specific situation
- Shows personal involvement in resolving a conflict

b. Weakness: Underdeveloped scenario Your ethical dilemma lacks clarity and depth. It's unclear why aiming in handball is considered a moral or ethical issue. The situation you describe seems more like a minor disagreement rather than a significant ethical challenge. For example, you state "my friend said that a lot of people were aiming and he looked pretty annoyed," but you don't explain why this was problematic or how it presented an ethical dilemma for you.

c. Exemplar: "During a handball game, I noticed some players deliberately targeting weaker opponents. This raised an ethical dilemma for me: should I speak up and risk alienating my teammates, or stay silent and allow unfair play to continue?"

#3 (Diary entry): a. Strengths:

- Creative and imaginative storyline
- Incorporation of historical and scientific elements

b. Weakness: Disjointed narrative Your diary entry, while imaginative, lacks coherence and clear progression. The narrative jumps from one event to another without smooth transitions or adequate explanations. For instance, you abruptly introduce characters like "Nick" and "Dr Emilia" without properly establishing their roles or significance. You write, "Then I stared through the portal horror piercing my body. The timeline was changing," but don't provide context for this sudden shift in events.

c. Exemplar: "As I peered through the shimmering portal, a wave of horror washed over me. The familiar timeline I knew was unravelling before my eyes, replaced by an alternate history where Hitler's victory in 1917 threatened to rewrite everything we knew."

Actionable task: Rewrite the ethical dilemma paragraph, focusing on a more substantial moral challenge. Ensure you clearly explain the conflicting values or principles at stake and how you ultimately made your decision.

Overall score: 43/50

#2 Once I was playing handball with my friends and afterwards my friend said that a lot of people were aiming and he looked pretty annoyed ~~but I was like~~ [, but I said] it's all about having fun and challenges will let you get better so you can face those challenges and treat them like practice.
