

Section 1:

#1: "16 year old Zoe Chen walked in the enigmatic theater. She was considered as an apparition because her body was translucent. Her parents and other people that knew her called her a ghost because her parents were ghosts. If she listened closely, she could faintly hear the sounds of Willy whispering, as she finally got fed up with all of his incorrect movements."

a. Strengths:

- Creative concept of a ghost-like protagonist
- Intriguing setting of an enigmatic theatre

b. Weaknesses: Inconsistent characterisation Your description of Zoe is contradictory. You state she's "considered as an apparition" and called a ghost, yet she interacts physically with the world. This creates confusion about her nature and abilities. For instance, how can she "get fed up" with Willy's movements if she's a ghost?

c. Exemplar: "16-year-old Zoe Chen entered the enigmatic theatre, her translucent form barely visible in the dim light. Though alive, her ghostly appearance - inherited from her spectral parents - often left others unsure how to interact with her."

#2: "Zoe was sitting on the fence, she couldn't decide which side to pick. Sometimes she would fall to one side of the fence, and then fall to the other side. This was a life long decision that she couldn't figure out which side to choose."

a. Strengths:

- Use of metaphor to illustrate indecision
- Shows character development through internal conflict

b. Weaknesses: Overuse of metaphor Your extended use of the "sitting on the fence" metaphor becomes repetitive and unclear. The image of Zoe physically falling off the fence distracts from the intended meaning of her indecision.

c. Exemplar: "Zoe found herself torn between the two perspectives, unable to fully commit to either side. This internal struggle over the American Dream's validity seemed destined to be a lifelong debate within her mind."

a. Strengths:

- Introduces societal conflict
- Shows different perspectives on the American Dream

b. Weaknesses: Lack of specificity Your description of the protests lacks detail and context. It's unclear how these protests relate to the theatre setting or Zoe's story. The vague reference to "a small amount of the population" doesn't provide a clear picture of the scale or impact of these protests.

c. Exemplar: "Outside the theatre, a crowd gathered. Some protesters held signs declaring 'The American Dream is Dead', while others chanted about its enduring promise. The debate that had begun on stage was now echoing through the streets."

Actionable task: Rewrite the opening paragraph, focusing on establishing a clear and consistent characterisation of Zoe. Ensure you explain how her ghostly nature affects her interactions with the physical world and other characters.

Overall score: 41/50

Section 2: Revision Guidelines

~~16-year-old~~ [16-year-old] Zoe Chen walked in the enigmatic ~~theater~~ [theatre]. She was considered ~~as~~ an apparition because her body was translucent. Her parents and other people ~~that~~ [who] knew her called her a ghost because her parents were ghosts. If she listened closely, she could faintly hear the sounds of Willy whispering, as she finally got fed up with all of his incorrect movements. #1 They were acting for the American Dream play which is that everyone has freedom and peace.' ~~Willys~~ [Willy's] movements are all wrong and he is not passionate about this play, you need to talk to him,' she moaned. They continued as though she hadn't said a word.

Willy, on the other hand, purposely made his moves weaker and heavier, which made Zoe even more furious. After some shouting and arguing, everything was back to normal. Willy was making his moves robust and energetic, and Zoe was happy.

'What even is the American Dream~~,~~[?]' Willy asked.

'~~It is~~ [It is] where everyone has freedom and respects each other,' Zoe replied.

'So what about money and fame?'

'That kind of stuff doesn't matter in life, all you need is happiness and freedom.'

Zoe started to wonder if this American ~~dream~~ [Dream] would actually become successful and if the world could finally be like it. But there are some places in the world where there are bad leaders of the country who control everyone. These places are obviously doing it for a reason, to make things fair. Not everyone can listen to America, and do what they want, even if it makes the world a better place.

An argument began to form with about five people. Zoe could hear ~~phases~~ [phrases] such as '~~The~~ ['The] American Dream is real,' and 'No it isn't.' It gradually escalated and became more intense as people were getting shoved and pushed.

#3 Protests began and a small amount of the population began to say that the American Dream will never come true, whereas some were saying that it will eventually come true.

#2 Zoe was sitting on the fence, she couldn't decide which side to pick. Sometimes she would fall to one side of the fence, and then fall to the other side. This was a ~~life-long~~ [lifelong] decision that she couldn't figure out which side to choose. 😊
