#1 (Introduction): a. Strengths:

- Engaging opening with a vivid scenario
- Clear presentation of the central question

b. Weaknesses: Lack of Coherence Your introduction jumps between different ideas without a smooth transition. For instance, you move from discussing the Digital Age to embarrassing photos, then to a job interview scenario. This abrupt shift can confuse your readers and weaken your argument's impact.

c. Exemplar: "As we enter the Digital Age, our youth are increasingly exposed to electronics at an early age. This exposure brings with it a new phenomenon: 'sharenting', where parents share countless photos and stories about their children online. But what are the long-term consequences of this practice?"

#2 (Privacy rights argument): a. Strengths:

- Use of a credible source (UN Convention on Human Rights)
- Rhetorical question to engage the reader

b. Weaknesses: Underdeveloped Argument Your argument about privacy rights lacks depth. You cite the UN Convention but don't fully explain how sharenting violates this right. The connection between security and parental posting isn't clearly established, leaving your argument open to counterpoints.

c. Exemplar: "The UN Convention on Human Rights states that 'Everyone has the right to life, liberty and security of person'. In the context of sharenting, this right to security extends to a child's digital presence. When parents post without permission, they potentially compromise their child's online security, creating a digital footprint the child hasn't consented to."

#3 (Conclusion): a. Strengths:

- Clear call to action
- Restatement of main argument

b. Weaknesses: Lack of Synthesis Your conclusion introduces new ideas (e.g., "cybersafe Australia") without fully tying them back to your main arguments. This can leave your readers feeling that your essay hasn't come full circle, weakening the overall impact of your piece.

c. Exemplar: "In conclusion, children's right to privacy, protection from cyberbullying, and the opportunity to develop digital literacy all hinge on their ability to have a say in what is shared about them online. By allowing children to veto their parents' social media posts about them, we can create a more respectful, secure, and educationally beneficial online environment for our youth."

Actionable Task: Rewrite your introduction, focusing on creating a smoother flow between ideas. Start with the concept of sharenting, then explain its potential consequences, and finally present your central question. This will provide a more logical progression for your readers.

Overall Score: 44/50