

#1: "Climate Change has become a pressing issue of our modern day society with serious consequences for ecosystems, the economy, and human health. It has become embedded into our society and can't be ignored. Every drop of fuel counts from fuel hungry cars that soak in every single kilometre. Then you see desperate families going to net zero making change but then all of that effort wasted in vain as huge corporations destroying all of that by using all of these fossil fuels."

a. Strengths:

- Strong opening statement highlighting the importance of climate change
- Identifies key areas affected by climate change (ecosystems, economy, health)

b. Weaknesses: Inconsistent Tone and Structure Your writing shifts abruptly from a formal tone to a more casual one, particularly in the phrases "fuel hungry cars that soak in every single kilometre" and "desperate families going to net zero". This inconsistency disrupts the flow of your argument and diminishes its impact.

c. Exemplar: "Climate change is a pressing issue in our modern society, with serious consequences for ecosystems, the economy, and human health. It has become deeply embedded in our daily lives and cannot be ignored. While individual efforts to reduce carbon footprints are commendable, they are often overshadowed by the massive environmental impact of large corporations continuing to rely heavily on fossil fuels."

#2: "Individual action isn't enough. We need systemic actions to help stop this pressing matter as the Earth has been pushed to the limits begging us to stop but we play this risky game of environmental roulette and hope we will be the ones to make it out."

a. Strengths:

- Emphasises the need for systemic action
- Uses vivid imagery to convey the urgency of the situation

b. Weaknesses: Overuse of Metaphors Your writing relies heavily on metaphorical language, such as "environmental roulette" and "Earth... begging us to stop". While these can be effective, overusing them can detract from the seriousness of your argument and make it seem less grounded in facts.

c. Exemplar: "Individual action, while important, is insufficient to address the scale of the climate crisis. We need systemic changes to mitigate this pressing issue. The Earth's ecosystems are under severe stress, and continued inaction poses an existential risk to our planet and future generations."

#3: "By promoting systematic changes we can transcend above this pressing matter of climate change!"

a. Strengths:

- Concludes with a call to action
- Maintains an optimistic tone about the potential for change

b. Weaknesses: Lack of Specificity Your conclusion lacks concrete examples of the systematic changes you're advocating for. The phrase "transcend above" is vague and doesn't provide a clear picture of what overcoming climate change would look like.

c. Exemplar: "By promoting systematic changes, such as transitioning to renewable energy sources and implementing stricter environmental regulations, we can effectively address the pressing issue of climate change and create a sustainable future for our planet."

Actionable Task: Rewrite the opening paragraph, focusing on maintaining a consistent formal tone throughout. Ensure you provide specific examples of both individual and corporate actions related to climate change, avoiding overly metaphorical language.
