

Interview question: if you had one superpower you could wish for, what would it be? It would be telekinesis because it would be cool to move things around with your mind. Just imagine the endless possibilities from stopping wars to moving entire planets! You can also annoy bullies and defend yourself. You can save lives. Stop disaster. I mean... what couldn't you do to help. If you master it, you might be able to help with dangerous missions and dangerous jobs! But one thing's for certain, telekinesis is undoubtedly the best superpower anyone could wish for.

The runners up are going to be Time travel, telepathy and energy manipulation because they are all pretty decent powers. For example with time travel you can ace history tests, look at huge events in person and maybe even prevent horrific ones. Why I picked telepathy and energy manipulation would be because there would be endless ways to have fun with them or just defend yourself by using the powers.

The Final Flight

As Trans Nation Flight 307 took off at San Francisco Airport, Ava, a seventeen year old, experienced abnormal things that started to occur. The lights started flickering and as the feeling of something horrific was about to happen intensified. The plane lost power... as the panics, cries and screams of people echoed throughout the plane Ava just shrugged it off and peeped out the window. Her eyes widened. She shut the window with a thud, not daring to say a word about what she saw. When everybody expected the worst, the pilots regained control and the plane was back to normal. Or everyone thought it was.

Then... flash! A blinding light flashed before everyone's eyes and it also came with the sounds of other planes whirling next to them. Not even a second later the passengers started to hear booms and bangs. Just everyone glanced out of their window. They were shocked to the core as they saw a city that had been set ablaze. Bang! The tail just fell off one of the passengers shouted as everyone was in a deep state of shock and speechlessness. Moments later the plane started to nose dive. Ava looked at her phone... no signal. After the plane was stabilized. "What is happening?" she declared. But no one responded. Everyone was bewildered, not just Ava. Until a World War Two veteran spoke. He explained that he recognized that they were in the middle of the Battle of Berlin, a war that he fought in. Explaining that any aircraft from any side of the war could potentially shoot them down. Suddenly... "heads!" shouted the veteran as a British Spitfire splattered bullets into the plane via the opened tail section of the plane.

The plane then started to dive nose first once again. The speakers then called out "God you have my soul" and everyone braced for impact. Ava looked around her and also covered her head and braces for impact. With a million thoughts flying around in her mind she blacked out all of a sudden. When she woke up, she was surrounded by cries and groans and saw people with severed bodies and worse. But she was in a serious state too, covered in bruises and fatally cut. As she stumbled to a nearby tree and leaned on it. She succumbed to her injuries.
