

Section 1:

#1 (First sentence): a. Strengths:

- You introduce the main idea clearly.
- You use a conditional statement effectively.

b. Weaknesses: Awkward phrasing Your opening sentence lacks fluency and contains grammatical errors. The phrase "it will probably be" should be "it would probably be" to maintain consistency with the conditional tense. Additionally, the sentence structure could be more refined to engage the reader from the start.

c. Exemplar: "If I could possess a superpower, it would undoubtedly be the ability to remain calm in the face of challenges."

#2 (Second and third sentences): a. Strengths:

- You provide relatable examples (tests and homework).
- You highlight the benefits of staying calm.

b. Weaknesses: Lack of coherence Your ideas jump from one to another without smooth transitions. The rhetorical question "Isn't it frustrating..." feels disconnected from the previous statement. Moreover, the benefit mentioned (higher test scores) is introduced abruptly without proper elaboration.

c. Exemplar: "We've all experienced the frustration of stress during tests or when faced with excessive homework. However, the ability to stay calm in such situations can significantly improve performance, often resulting in higher test scores."

#3 (Last two sentences): a. Strengths:

- You emphasise the universal applicability of the superpower.
- You conclude by reiterating the main point.

b. Weaknesses: Redundancy and spelling errors Your concluding sentences repeat the same idea without adding new information. The phrase "huge potential" is used twice, making it redundant. Additionally, there are spelling errors ("effects" instead of "affects", "use ful" instead of "useful") that detract from the overall quality of the writing.

c. Exemplar: "This unique ability has immense potential in a world where stress is a pervasive problem affecting people globally. Indeed, the power to remain calm in stressful situations would be an invaluable asset throughout one's life."

Actionable task: Rewrite the essay, focusing on creating smoother transitions between ideas and elaborating on how staying calm can be beneficial in different scenarios. Ensure to proofread for spelling and grammatical errors.

Overall score: 39/50

Section 2: Revision Guidelines

If I had a superpower, ~~it will~~ [it would] probably be the ability to stay calm despite challenges. Isn't it frustrating when you stress out for all sorts of things like tests and excess homework~~.~~ [?] It is quite a good ability to have~~,~~ as keeping calm in test situations ~~give~~ [gives] you a higher score than when stressed. This ability is also helpful in future life as ~~under situations,~~ [in various circumstances,] you can focus on one thing and complete it, potentially saving your life. This unique ability has a huge potential in a world ~~were~~ [where] stress is a huge problem that ~~effects~~ [affects] people worldwide. It will always be a ~~use-ful~~ [useful] power to be calm in stressful situations.