

Section 1:

#1 (First paragraph): a. Strengths:

- Vivid imagery in describing the developers
- Effective use of contrasting elements to create tension

b. Weaknesses: Overreliance on Negative Descriptors Your writing heavily relies on negative descriptors to portray the developers, which may come across as exaggerated or cliché. Phrases like "heartless smirks", "sinister beady little eyes", and "teeth were yellowed with hints of dark spots" create a caricature rather than a nuanced portrayal.

c. Exemplar: "The developers, with their polished suits and confident demeanour, discussed the project in hushed tones, their words laden with promises of profit and progress."

#2 (Third paragraph): a. Strengths:

- Clear narrative progression
- Introduction of supporting characters with distinct roles

b. Weaknesses: Underdeveloped Conflict Resolution Your writing introduces a conflict but resolves it too quickly without exploring the complexities. The phrase "But, just as the crowd began to show signs of support, the developers unveiled a surprise" rushes through a potentially pivotal moment without delving into the emotional impact or strategic implications.

c. Exemplar: "As the crowd's support began to swell, the developers unveiled their trump card: endorsements from influential local businesses. This unexpected move sent shockwaves through Mia's team, forcing them to reassess their strategy."

#3 (Last paragraph): a. Strengths:

- Builds tension through escalating challenges
- Shows character growth and determination

b. Weaknesses: Abrupt Ending Your writing ends abruptly with "On the day of the vote, the community came." This leaves the reader hanging without a satisfying conclusion or resolution to the central conflict. The build-up throughout the piece deserves a more thorough and impactful ending.

c. Exemplar: "On the day of the vote, the community turned out in force. As Mia watched the ballots being counted, she realised that regardless of the outcome, their campaign had already achieved something remarkable: it had united the community in a way she never thought possible."

Actionable Task: Rewrite the final paragraph, focusing on providing a clear resolution to the conflict. Ensure you address the outcome of the vote and its impact on both Mia's group and the community as a whole.

Overall Score: 43/50

Section 2: Revision Guidelines

Mia stood in stunned silence, paralysed with trepidation as she watched the two suited developers talking amongst themselves. Their heartless smirks tore through Mia's soul as she stared miserably amidst the bustling crowd. The suited developers were bald with sinister beady little eyes, their teeth were yellowed with hints of dark spots. Their skin was flaky and seemed brittle as ancient parchment. They were spewing out words that poisoned the otherwise untrammelled skies with their deceit and hypocrisy spreading an evil hue around them. False promises drifted out, "Unprecedented profits... unfathomable capital gains... the stunning capital appreciation."

Later that day, Mia stumbled upon an article detailing the development proposal for Central Park. Her heart sank. The park was a haven, a sanctuary of green amidst the concrete jungle—a place where children played, joggers ran, and families picnicked. The thought of it being replaced by soulless skyscrapers was unbearable. Determined to save Central Park, Mia sprang into action. She gathered her friends, including Ava, a passionate environmentalist; Zack, a tech-savvy genius; and Leila, a gifted orator. Together, they formed the "Save Our Park" committee. Their first task was to raise awareness. They created a website,organised rallies, and distributed flyers, painting a vivid picture of what the community stood to lose. Challenges arose swiftly. The developers launched a counter-campaign, flooding social media with misleading ads, promising that the new development would bring jobs and boost the local economy.

#1 But, just as the crowd began to show signs of support, the developers unveiled a surprise. They had secretly obtained endorsements from influential local businesses, swaying public opinion in their favour. Disheartened but not defeated, Mia and her friends devised a new plan. They would gather signatures for a petition to bring the issue to a public vote. Outside a wild, chaotic cacophony of violent brainwashed groups protested outside, they were chanting songs of oblivious factors to stop the building of towering skyscrapers in Central Park. But this wasn't enough. People oppressed this urgent call with another mob of crazed people protesting against the mob. Mia had to stop this. Every day after school and work, they canvassed the neighbourhood, explaining the long-term consequences of losing the park.

#2 Challenges arose swiftly. The developers launched a counter-campaign, flooding social media with misleading ads, promising that the new development would bring jobs and boost the local economy. Many residents, enticed by these promises, began to waver in their support for the park. The group decided to host a town hall meeting to present their case. Leila's powerful speech highlighted the environmental impact and the irreplaceable loss of community space. However, just as the crowd began to show signs of support, the developers unveiled a surprise. They had secretly obtained endorsements from influential local businesses, swaying public opinion in their favour.

Disheartened but not defeated, Mia and her friends devised a new plan. They would gather signatures for a petition to bring the issue to a public vote. Outside, a wild, chaotic cacophony of violent, brainwashed groups protested, chanting songs against the building of towering skyscrapers in Central Park. But this wasn't enough. Another mob of crazed people protested against the initial mob. Mia had to stop this. Every day after school and work, they canvassed the neighbourhood, explaining the long-term consequences of losing the park. Slowly but surely, signatures piled up. The major obstacle came when they discovered that one of their most trusted allies had been bribed by the developers. This betrayal threatened to discredit their entire campaign. It was then that Zack suggested using an online platform to gather digital signatures, aiming to bypass the compromised paper petitions. They worked tirelessly through the night, converting all their data and reaching out to supporters online. By morning, they had exceeded their goal. ~~As the day of the vote approached,~~ [As the day of the vote drew near,] Mia faced a difficult decision. The developers offered a compromise: they would preserve a small portion of the park if Mia and her friends would cease their campaign. It was tempting, but Mia knew it was a ploy to weaken their resolve. After a heated discussion with her team, they decided to reject the offer and continue fighting for the entire park. #3 On the day of the vote, the community came.
