

Section 1:

#1 Opening Paragraph: Strengths:

- Strong character introduction with clear emotional stakes
- Effective establishment of the business context and conflict

Weaknesses: Plot Development Efficiency → Your opening paragraph contains repetitive information about the failing business and past struggles. The phrase "The past is always terrible but the future is brighter" disrupts the flow and feels disconnected from the narrative setup.

Exemplar: "Rick, a timid boy with no professional knowledge of chicken batter, stared at the machine bewildered by its numbers. His mother's struggling chicken-batter company faced rising expenses and dwindling sales, but Rick was determined to change their fortune."

#2 Sensory Description (Second Paragraph): Strengths:

- Rich sensory details that immerse readers
- Effective use of onomatopoeia with "Clink! Swish!"

Weaknesses: Sentence Structure Cohesion → Your transition between sensory details feels abrupt. The phrase "Employee members were drinking gallons of water" appears disconnected from the previous sensory descriptions and needs smoother integration.

Exemplar: "The pungent smell of lemons and salt hung in the air, clashing with the aroma of chicken and flour, while frustrated employees gulped water to wash away the bitter taste of failed batters."

#3 Competition Resolution: Strengths:

- Building tension through numerical scoring
- Unexpected positive resolution

Weaknesses: Pacing Control → Your conclusion rushes through important events. The phrase "Then, one of the judges made a resolution" introduces a major plot point too abruptly without sufficient buildup.

Exemplar: "As tension mounted over the tied scores, a judge stepped forward with an unprecedented proposition: both companies could share the victory, leading to an unexpected partnership that would transform both businesses."

Actionable Task: Rewrite the second paragraph focusing on creating smoother transitions between the sensory descriptions and the discovery of the competition poster. Ensure each sentence flows naturally into the next by connecting the sensory elements to Rick's emotional journey.

Score: 42/50

#1 The Ultimate Chicken Batter Recipe

Rick, a timid boy with no professional knowledge about ~~making chicken~~ [making chicken] batter stared at a machine ~~bewildered what did~~ [bewildered by what] the numbers meant. His mother owned a failing chicken-batter company because there were not many sales every day. The expenses were rising because of inflation rates and nothing could be done but that was the past. ~~The past is always terrible but the future is brighter.~~ [Despite the challenges, hope remained on the horizon.] I am going to share a story about a boy named Rick and how he went from zero to hero.

#2 ~~Clink! Swish!~~ [Clink! Swish!] The doors to a chicken batter lab opened while the clinking of metal and rock salt rang in his ears. The pungent smell of lemons and salt hung in the air, clashing with the aroma of chicken and flour. ~~Employee members~~ [Employees] were drinking gallons of water, trying to flush out the taste of the batter. In simple words, it was a catastrophe. As Rick walked in, ~~disgusted, something caught~~ [disgusted, something caught] his eye. It was a poster ~~that was advertising~~ [advertising] a competition for any company that sells chicken batter. The smooth texture of the finely printed paper contrasted with the ~~jagged~~ [jagged] edges of the floor. This was where Rick's journey had begun.

"To calculate the moisture level, you have to do Times by square root G," explained Rick's instructor. Rick scribbled furiously in his notebook, determined to help his mother's company. "The juice factor has to be between 3 and 4 while the crunch factor has to be between 1 and 7." Rick knew this was his destiny and he had to complete the journey. After months of knowledge and practice, Rick saw ~~the A puny~~ [how puny] compared to his knowledge ~~compared to~~ [from when] he was at the start. The employee's shirts changed from ragged and dusty to clean, smooth uniforms. The company was growing and it was getting viral but the big day was nearing.

#3 As Rick motivated his colleagues he himself could feel their worry but suddenly, somebody shouted "Boss! I have important news! One of our workers has discovered the perfect batch! It qualified for the first stage international chicken batch competition!" Rick knew this was good news because they now have a chance to win the mega prize. The next day was the final day. It was an excellent day. No clouds or wind. The perfect temperature as well. This was an opportunity for them to win and Rick's team handed in their well-prepared dish. The first number was 9. The second 9. The third 10. But one problem remained, which was that they were tied with the company's ultimate rival. Then, one of the judges made a resolution. The two companies could combine and get the whole payment with no problem! Rick's mother and the manager of the rivaling company shook hands and the deal was a deal, the two got the whole payment and an extra life lesson: the more the merrier. They also got another bonus payment which was something called friendship.
