

Section 1:

#1: "As Rick gazed out onto the colossal tower that stood before him, scarring the landscape that once used to be abundant of lush greenery. This place was an absolute mess, after what had occurred – the terrifying nuclear accident."

Strengths:

- Your vivid imagery effectively establishes the scene's atmosphere
- Your use of contrasting elements (colossal tower vs. lush greenery) creates compelling tension

Weaknesses: Sentence Structure → The first sentence is a fragment that disrupts the flow of your narrative. The use of "that" appears twice in quick succession, creating redundancy.

Exemplar: "Rick gazed at the colossal tower before him, its harsh lines scarring what was once a landscape abundant with lush greenery."

#2: "Rick had intricately watched as his father devoted all his time into a rewarding success. The development of nuclear fusion would revolutionise the world."

Strengths:

- Your connection between personal and scientific elements adds depth
- Your inclusion of motivation creates emotional investment

Weaknesses: Word Choice → The phrase "intricately watched" is misused and creates confusion in meaning. The sentence structure doesn't effectively convey the relationship between watching and devotion.

Exemplar: "Rick had closely observed his father's unwavering devotion to achieving success. Nuclear fusion, they believed, would revolutionise the world."

#3: "As the energy transferred through the tower, it illuminated the place. A crowd soon began forming around, clapping along with each other. They started cheering for Rick and his father."

Strengths:

- Your build-up to the climactic moment shows good pacing
- Your emotional payoff effectively ties to earlier setup

Weaknesses: Detail Development → The description lacks specific sensory details that could make the moment more impactful. The reactions feel generic rather than specific to this significant achievement.

Exemplar: "Energy surged through the tower, bathing the surrounding area in brilliant light. A gathering crowd burst into thunderous applause, their cheers echoing Rick's father's name alongside his own."

Actionable Task: Rewrite the final paragraph focusing specifically on sensory details - what does success look, sound, and feel like? Include at least three specific sensory descriptions to make the triumph more vivid and immediate.

Section 2:

#1 ~~As Rick gazed out onto the colossal tower that stood before him, scarring the landscape that once used to be abundant of lush greenery.~~ [Rick gazed at the colossal tower before him, scarring the landscape that had once been abundant with lush greenery.] This place was ~~an absolute mess, after what had occurred~~ — [an absolute mess after what had occurred:] the terrifying nuclear accident. He remembered exactly what had taken place – blood curdling screams and ear splitting explosions. But as he looked around him, Three Mile Island deserved a second chance.

#2 ~~Rick had intricately watched as his father devoted all his time into a rewarding success.~~ [Rick had watched his father devote countless hours to achieving rewarding success.] The development of nuclear fusion would revolutionise the world. But when the accident happened, Rick's father's name went down with it, and many people were cautious and untrustworthy of him. ~~But Rick didn't want his father to remain disappointed,~~ [Not wanting his father to remain disappointed,] so he helped his father day after night, experimenting with wires, chemical reactions, and so much more.

Rick knew how much his father's dream meant to him, and as his father became weary of age, he couldn't let his dream crush. So, as days pass, Rick's father eventually passes away. Even though of the loss, Rick slides the thought away and pursues his father's dream. After years and years of dedication, it was finished.

#3 Rick stood back from the creation. He knew that this would go down in history, either way. As the machine began whirring, Rick's mind whirled like a bull barging in his head. What if it didn't work properly? What if I connected the wrong wires? What if nothing happens? Will my father be mad at me? Beads of sweat trickled down Rick's temples. But his thoughts didn't last for long. ~~As the energy transferred through the tower, it illuminated the place.~~ [Energy surged through the tower, filling the area with brilliant light.] ~~A crowd soon began forming around, clapping along with each other.~~ [A crowd gathered quickly, their applause growing thunderous.] They started cheering for Rick and his father. A smile crawled across Rick's face, feeling his father's smile glowing down on him, and his hands comfortingly placed down on his shoulder. He had done it.
