

Intro music

Host: Hello and welcome back to the daily news. I'm Sarah, your host. Today, a Brazilian street performance in Mongolia has shocked tourists. Today, we'll be interviewing Ana, one of the Mongolian dancers.

Ana: Thank you, Sarah.

Host: Ana, tell us all about the special occasion.

Ana: My crew and I had been preparing for the visit to Mongolia for a long time. When we went there, we were so excited about giving the performance. On the day of the show, we all dressed in colourful outfits. There were clothes of all different colours. My set of clothing was a pink, orange and yellow leotard with a frilly tutu. I had a headband on my head and ballet shoes with ruffles on them. Many of my friends had different outfits, however. My other friend had a blue and purple leotard with a frilly over embroidered headband. We were all covered in decorations and glitter.

Host: What was the music like?

Ana: Oh, it was amazing! Every single musical instrument you can imagine had been thrown in there, creating not just a groovy beat, but a rich, warm sensation as you danced with the song. The drums followed a strict beat, while the piano went all out with its symphony. Even the flute was playing faster and livelier than a Peregrine Falcon! It was a simply and truly the greatest thing.

Host: Wow. Sounds very groovy. Tell me, Ana. How did your crew dance to the music?

Ana: Well, Sarah, when people say that the human body is made for amazing things, I don't doubt it. The way we twirled across the street, pirouetting through the crowd, was the most breathtaking thing to see. Even our feet moved as fast as a hummingbird's wings. With all our colourful outfits, we looked like a rainbow ricocheting across the road. In fact, even the crowd couldn't resist moving along with us, filled with happiness and laughter.

Host: Astonishing. I must say, I shall visit Brazil or Mongolia one day! Ana, do you have any words to end this interview?

Ana: Find your passion. If I hadn't found my passion, I would still be at university learning to be an accountant! When you find your passion, you find your true place in the world.

Host: Lovely. Now, we must say goodbye to Ana, the Brazilian dancer!

Ana: Goodbye everyone!

Host: Now, Take what Ana said and keep it with you forever. Remember: Find your Passion!
