

Section 1:

#1 First Body Paragraph Strengths:

- Clear focus on cultural preservation through generational knowledge transfer
- Strong emotional appeal by highlighting elderly residents' connection to the area

Weaknesses: Underdeveloped Supporting Evidence → Your paragraph would benefit from specific examples of these traditions and cultural practices you mention. The statement "These elderly people are the people who have been passed down traditions" needs more concrete details to strengthen your argument.

Exemplar: "These elderly residents, who have preserved ancient traditions like the centuries-old Chandni Chowk food culture and religious festivals, serve as living bridges between Old Delhi's past and present."

#2 Second Body Paragraph Strengths:

- Effective linking of preservation to economic benefits
- Clear cause-and-effect relationship established

Weaknesses: Repetitive Ideas → Your paragraph repeats the concept of economic growth without developing it further. The phrase "This will boost economic growth and help people find more money" could be more specific about how exactly this economic benefit manifests.

Exemplar: "Tourists' spending directly benefits local artisans, shopkeepers, and tour guides, while generating tax revenue that can fund further preservation efforts."

#3 Conclusion Paragraph Strengths:

- Successfully summarises main arguments
- Introduces a balanced perspective on tradition and modernity

Weaknesses: Limited Synthesis → Your conclusion introduces new ideas about "young people can continue their online work" without previous context or development in the body paragraphs.

Exemplar: "By preserving these historical districts while thoughtfully modernising their interiors, Old Delhi can maintain its cultural identity while adapting to contemporary needs."

Actionable Task: Rewrite your second body paragraph focusing specifically on how tourist spending directly impacts different sectors of Old Delhi's economy, providing at least two concrete examples.

---

Score: 40/50

---

Section 2:

#1 Should historical districts be replaced with startup hubs?

Conserving historical districts will save a more familiar place for older people in the town since many of them lived there when they were little. Also, it gives a chance to boost ~~economies~~ [the economy] since the historical monuments can attract tourists to come to the town and spend money. The monuments can also be modified on the inside, which should attract more visitors. They all benefit Old Delhi as it preserves heritage, boosts ~~economies~~ [the economy], and combines modern with cultural heritage.

~~#2 Firstly, it saves a familiar place for older people that have spent their childhood here.~~ [Firstly, it preserves a familiar place for older people who have spent their childhood here.] These elderly people are the people who have ~~been~~ passed down traditions and cultural practices from their ancestors. If the historical districts are conserved, these ancient traditions and cultural practices will be continued to be passed down through the future generations. By doing so, Old Delhi's culture and traditions will continue to thrive throughout the future generations.

Furthermore, it boosts economic growth by attracting tourists into Old Delhi. Tourists will willingly spend money to come to the town to see the priceless artifacts in the historical buildings. This will boost economic growth and help people find more money. This can also raise money for renovating the interior structure and layout of the historical buildings, which will also help with boosting the economy.

Last but not least, redesigning or reshaping the historical buildings will combine cultural heritage with modern practices. It will speed up economic growth at the same time. It will also raise Old Delhi's ~~famousness~~ [fame], which will attract even more tourists. By combining the past and present, it will create a balance between heritage and modern.

~~#3 In conclusion, preserving historical buildings and monuments are clearly important, but balancing both past and present could also be an acceptable alternative.~~ [In conclusion, while preserving historical buildings and monuments is clearly important, balancing both past and present could also be an acceptable alternative.] Both ways boost ~~economies~~ [the economy], ~~preserves~~ [preserve] the past culture, and ~~raises~~ [raise] the ~~famousness~~ [fame] of Old Delhi. In this way, old people can have a place to settle, and young people can continue their online work.