

Section 1:

#1: "Everyone knows that white is the best A4 paper ever made right? I strongly believe that white is the best A4 paper as it is always available for people, it's very professional, versatile and of course, it's very cheap."

Strengths:

- Clear thesis statement presenting your main argument
- Effective preview of supporting points

Weakness: Run-on sentence structure → Your opening contains multiple independent clauses joined incorrectly. The rhetorical question flows directly into your main statement without proper punctuation.

Exemplar: "Is white truly the best A4 paper ever made? I strongly believe it is, as white paper offers consistent availability, professionalism, versatility and cost-effectiveness."

#2: "White is the standard colour for nearly every business conveying a sense of professionalism and formality. White is also always used in mails making it look more sharp."

Strengths:

- Relevant supporting evidence
- Clear connection to professional context

Weakness: Repetitive sentence beginnings → Your sentences repeatedly start with "White is," weakening the flow of your argument and making the writing sound monotonous.

Exemplar: "As the standard colour in business environments, white paper conveys professionalism and formality. Its crisp appearance in correspondence further enhances its sharp, businesslike appeal."

#3: "While coloured paper is used for creative projects, white paper remains the most practical and versatile making it the choice for many people. White is the best colour for many reasons, it's always available, its professional, its versatile and best of all, it is cheap."

Strengths:

- Strong concluding statement
- Effective summary of main points

Weakness: Punctuation errors → Your conclusion contains missing apostrophes and incorrect comma usage, particularly in the list of qualities ("it's professional, it's versatile").

Exemplar: "While coloured paper serves creative projects well, white paper remains the most practical and versatile choice for many people. It stands out as the best option due to its availability, professionalism, versatility and affordability."

Actionable Task: Rewrite your introduction paragraph, focusing on varying your sentence structures and ensuring proper punctuation between independent clauses.

The Best A4 Paper: White ~~Everyone knows that white is the best A4 paper ever made right? [Is white truly the best A4 paper ever made?] I strongly believe that white is the best A4 paper as it is always available for people, it's very professional, versatile and of course, it's very cheap. [I strongly believe that white is the best A4 paper, as it offers consistent availability, professionalism, versatility and cost-effectiveness.] #1~~

First and foremost, white paper is almost always available for people to buy as it is nearly always in stock, unlike the other colours which are usually taken just after they are put on the shelf since there are so many ~~colour~~ [colours]. ~~It~~ [It] is hard to maintain the supply of all the different ~~colour~~ [coloured] paper. Thus white paper is the best A4 paper as it is always available.

~~It's crystal clear that white is undoubtedly the best colour for paper to be because it is professional. [White is undoubtedly the best colour for paper because of its professional appearance.] #2 White is the standard colour for nearly every business conveying a sense of professionalism and formality. White is also always used in mails making it look more sharp. [As the standard colour in business environments, white paper conveys professionalism and formality. Its crisp appearance in correspondence further enhances its sharp, businesslike appeal.]~~

Furthermore, white is versatile. White is a neutral colour and it doesn't interfere with any other colour that can be printed or written on it. Being a neutral colour, white is suitable for a range of documents as you can write on it with many coloured pens or pencils and you will still be able to see the colours unlike coloured paper. This is because some colours are dark and you will not be able to see if something that is also dark is used on it. Thus, white is the best colour for A4 paper because it is versatile.

Last but not least, white paper is a lot cheaper than all of the other papers. While the paper is still a pulp or a mushy mess, dye is poured into the mush creating coloured paper. The dye used is a lot more expensive than the bleach used to make white paper. Therefore, white is the best colour for A4 paper as it is cheaper than coloured paper.

~~While coloured paper is used for creative projects, white paper remains the most practical and versatile making it the choice for many people. White is the best colour for many reasons, it's always available, its professional, its versatile and best of all, it is cheap.~~ [While coloured paper serves creative projects well, white paper remains the most practical and versatile choice for many people.
