

Section 1:

#1: Opening Paragraph Strengths:

- Strong establishment of diverse perspectives through social class contrast
- Clear identification of specific locations adds authenticity

Weaknesses: Structural Coherence → Your opening lacks smooth transitions between ideas. The jump from "locals who take the ferry" to "Bondi Beach" feels abrupt. Consider how "The most famous beach in the world, Bondi Beach" could flow more naturally from the previous point about water quality.

Exemplar: "Different parts of society, from working-class locals to wealthy tourists, raise concerns about Sydney's water quality. While locals commuting via Sydney Harbour and the Parramatta River witness troubling sights daily, the situation at Bondi Beach particularly affects tourism during the Australian summer from December to February."

#2: Protest Scene Strengths:

- Direct dialogue effectively conveys emotion
- Clear presentation of the central conflict

Weaknesses: Scene Development → Your portrayal of the police response lacks depth. The line "they were like, 'Good point,' so they joined in" oversimplifies what would likely be a complex interaction. You could expand on the reasons behind their support.

Exemplar: "When the police witnessed the peaceful protest, they recognised the validity of the concerns about public health and tourism. After careful consideration, they decided to support the cause through legal channels."

#3: Resolution Strengths:

- Clear consequence of the court case
- Realistic timeframe for environmental cleanup

Weaknesses: Conclusion Development → Your ending feels rushed with "After this, every member of Sydney Water is cleaning up." The transition from the court scene to the resolution needs more detail about how this solution was implemented.

Exemplar: "Following the court's decision, Sydney Water implemented a comprehensive cleanup programme, with all departments contributing to the restoration of Sydney's waterways—a process expected to span several months, if not years."

Actionable Task: Rewrite the protest scene (paragraphs 2-4) focusing on developing a more detailed interaction between the protesters and police, including their motivations for supporting the cause.

Overall Score: 40/50

Section 2:

#1 Different parts of society, from working-class locals to rich tourists, always complain about how dirty the water around Sydney is. Locals who take the ferry across Sydney Harbour and the Parramatta River complain about their unappealing sights. ~~The most famous beach in the world, Bondi Beach, attracts a lot of tourists through December to February, when it is summer in Australia.~~ [Bondi Beach, one of the world's most renowned beaches, draws numerous tourists from December to February during the Australian summer.] Rich tourists always complain that they can't swim in the unsanitary waters.

Ryan Wilson is leading a peaceful protest against Sydney Water to clean up the water surrounding Sydney.

#2 "Tourists paid a lot of good money to swim in our famed beaches, but our waters are dirty! You scammed the tourists!" he exclaimed.

~~When the police heard the protest, they were like, "Good point," so they joined in.~~ [Upon hearing the protesters' grievances, the police acknowledged the validity of their concerns and decided to support their cause.]

The police sent Sydney Water to court.

"Order in the court! What is the case this time?" grumbled the frustrated judge.

"Sydney Water is scamming us by making the tourists wanting to swim, but the water is dirty!" said Ryan furiously.

"I am guilty of doing this," replied the CEO of Sydney Water.

The judge strikes his gavel.

#3 ~~After this, every member of Sydney Water is cleaning up the water surrounding Sydney.~~ [Following the verdict, Sydney Water mobilised its entire workforce to begin the extensive cleanup of Sydney's waterways.] It will take months or even years to come.
