

Section 1:

#1 Strengths:

- Clear statement of purpose in introducing the main argument
- Good attempt at providing a preview of supporting reasons

Weaknesses: Underdeveloped reasoning → Your opening claims lack specific evidence. The phrase "it obviously is blue" needs more context and explanation. Your reasoning relies heavily on personal opinion without concrete support.

Exemplar: After careful consideration of various colours suitable for A4 paper, blue stands out as the optimal choice due to its visual appeal, practical benefits, and psychological impact.

#2 Strengths:

- Attempts to compare different colour options
- Shows understanding of contrast between colours

Weaknesses: Repetitive and circular arguments → Your discussion about blue being "interesting and amazing" repeats similar ideas without adding depth. The comparison with yellow feels incomplete and needs more development. You use phrases like "plain and simply boring" without explaining why.

Exemplar: Unlike the harsh brightness of yellow that can strain our eyes, or the clinical plainness of white, blue offers a balanced visual experience that enhances readability while maintaining professional appeal.

#3 Strengths:

- Attempts to link blue to broader concepts
- Shows effort to provide a conclusion

Weaknesses: Lack of supporting evidence → Your claims about blue representing "wisdom" and "inspiration" need specific examples or research support. The conclusion simply restates previous points without strengthening the argument.

Exemplar: Research has shown that blue environments can enhance creativity and cognitive performance, making it an ideal choice for paper used in academic and professional settings.

→ Your writing would benefit from more specific examples and detailed explanations. You make several claims about blue's superiority but don't fully explain why these qualities make it the best choice for A4 paper. Try to include real-world examples or research to support your points. Your paragraphs could be longer and more developed to create a more convincing argument.

Actionable Task: Rewrite your second paragraph about blue being interesting, and include at least two specific examples or studies that show why blue is better than other colours for A4 paper.

---

Score: 38/50

---

Section 2:

~~What is the best colour for a random piece of A4 paper? It obviously is blue.~~ [What is the best colour for a random piece of A4 paper? After careful consideration, I believe it is blue.] #1 ~~I have three important reasons to support this claim. This is because blue is a popular colour, it is more interesting, unlike white, which is boring and plain and blue is strong and resilient.~~ [I have three important reasons to support this claim: blue is a popular colour, it is more interesting than plain white, and it is strong and resilient.]

~~Firstly, blue is a very popular colour. Blue is a very attractive colour for A4 paper, and many people have their favourite colour as blue, while white is not a popular colour, because it is so plain and unimportant. Meanwhile, blue is unimaginable and wonderful. This is why the best colour is undoubtedly blue.~~ [Firstly, blue is a very popular colour. It is particularly attractive for A4 paper, and many people choose blue as their favourite colour, whilst white lacks appeal due to its plainness. Blue's wonderful qualities make it the superior choice.]

#2 ~~Secondly, blue is interesting and amazing. It is not boring at all, while white is... plain and simply boring to look at. Meanwhile, yellow, the colour of the sun, may be way too bright and it may hurt our eyes. Blue, though, is perfect to "see " because it is not too bright and not boring. This is why blue is the best colour for A4 paper in my opinion.~~ [Secondly, blue possesses interesting and amazing qualities. Unlike the mundane appearance of white paper, or the potentially eye-straining brightness of yellow, blue offers the perfect balance of visual interest and comfort. These characteristics make blue the ideal choice for A4 paper.]

#3 ~~Furthermore, blue is strong and resilient. Blue is a beautiful colour and can represent wisdom, and also the colour of inspiration. This is clear that blue is extremely great.~~ [Furthermore, blue demonstrates strength and resilience. As a beautiful colour that symbolises wisdom and inspiration, blue clearly stands out as an exceptional choice.]

~~In conclusion, blue is definitely and undoubtedly the best colour of any type of A4 paper. Hope you agree with me.~~ [In conclusion, blue is definitively the best colour choice for any type of A4 paper. I hope you find my reasoning convincing.]