

Section 1:

#1: "With the abnormal rise in inflation, you would want to buy cheaper products because of the cost of living crisis. Inflation is when over time, your money is worth less, like say if you could buy a horse for less than one dollar in the 1700's, but now it is around $750 today."

Strengths:

- Clear attempt to explain inflation using a relatable example
- Good connection between inflation and the need to buy cheaper products

Weaknesses: Underdeveloped explanation → Your explanation of inflation lacks specific details and uses an oversimplified example. The horse example needs more context and current statistics. The connection between inflation and white paper could be stronger.

Exemplar: With the current rise in inflation affecting everyday items, white paper stands out as a cost-effective choice. For instance, while coloured paper typically costs £3 per pack, white paper averages at £1.50, making it a practical choice during these challenging economic times.

#2: "White paper is clearly simple to write on because of its blank space. It is such a tool for schools all around the globe, no matter what country."

Strengths:

- Makes a clear main point about white paper's practicality
- Attempts to show global relevance

Weaknesses: Limited supporting evidence → Your argument needs specific examples of how white paper's blank space benefits writing. You mention schools globally but don't provide concrete examples of its uses in education.

Exemplar: White paper's clean surface makes it perfect for writing, drawing and note-taking in schools. From mathematical calculations to creative writing, its versatility has made it the preferred choice in classrooms across Britain, America and Asia.

#3: "Some might say that white paper isn't as colourful as other types of paper. Well, they are wrong. You can colour the paper to make other colours and you can even have a multi-coloured one."

Strengths:

- Addresses a potential counterargument
- Shows creative thinking about paper's versatility

Weaknesses: Weak counterargument development → Your response to the counterargument needs more specific examples of how white paper can be transformed. The statement "Well, they are wrong" doesn't provide enough reasoning.

Exemplar: While some might prefer coloured paper, white paper's versatility allows for endless creative possibilities. Through watercolours, markers, or even collage techniques, you can transform it into any design you envision.

→ Your writing presents an interesting argument for white paper's superiority. However, you need to dig deeper into each point you make. Try to include real-world examples and specific details to support your claims. Your comparisons with other types of paper could be more detailed. Consider adding statistics or specific scenarios where white paper proves more beneficial.

Actionable task: Rewrite your second paragraph focusing on inflation's impact on paper prices - include real price comparisons between white and coloured paper from your local stationery shop.

Score: 39/50

Section 2:

~~We all use paper everyday~~ [We all use paper every day], with a tornado of colours like blue, yellow and green, but which is the best of them all? Of course it is white. White paper costs less, ~~easier to write on~~ [is easier to write on] and with a little bit of colour, you can transform a plain white piece into another colour!

#1 ~~With the abnormal rise in inflation, you would want to buy cheaper products because of the cost of living crisis.~~ [Due to the sharp rise in inflation, buying cheaper products has become essential during the cost of living crisis.] Inflation is when over time, your money is worth less, ~~like say if~~ [such as when] you could buy a horse for less than one dollar in the ~~1700's~~ [1700s], but now it is around $750 today. White paper is obviously more affordable than other colours of paper.

#2 White paper is clearly simple to write on because of its blank space. ~~It is such a tool~~ [It is an essential tool] for schools all around the globe, no matter what country. That is why white paper is used in all different kinds of books as a studying tool. White paper is evidently better to write on than other colours which you may not be able to see the words or the drawings.

#3 Some might say that white paper isn't as colourful as other types of paper. Well, they are wrong. ~~You can colour the paper to make other colours and you can even have a multi-coloured~~

~~one~~. [You can transform the paper into various colours, creating unique multi-coloured designs.] Washing the paper in colourful hues will make the paper more unique and it will stand out from other ones.

White paper is undeniably superior to any other colours because it costs less, it is easier to write on and you can colour it in like a rainbow to make it the more colourful one.
