

The Best Colour for A4 is White

Today I am going to talk about the appealing topic of white paper is the best colour for A4. Right after I tell this speech you all will support me.

Firstly, white is the best colour for A4 because of the clarity and readability of the text. Imagine you have to submit a project where the teacher has to read your assessment and supposedly be on a sheet of paper. Your friend chose Pink since you could choose any type of colour. You stick with the normal White. It is way readable if you use white paper, because of the clear opposite difference of Black and White. Now though you might be thinking, "Then, why can't we use a Blue pen on Red A4 paper? They both are opposite." Well that's because with White paper can be stained easily, it can be used with any type of pen and still look good.

Secondly, professionalism is very important in this concept. If you need to propose a new product to the CEO of the company, it would need to look very professional so that the CEO will accept it. However, if it is very childish with Pink covered all over it, the CEO would most likely reject it. Though if you use white and type it with Black, that would look professional. Yet, you might be thinking "How on earth is Black and White professional? They are the most boringest colours in the universe". Well, even though Black and White is very plain, they still are better than using colours for professional use. They also provide the simpleness of how the proposal is supposed to be and doesn't need the unnecessary touches of colour.

White is often associated with purity, perfection, honesty, cleanliness, and beginnings. If you embed these to paper that is the colour White, you can already recognise a new starting. How in enchanted stories where white represents a dove, writing on white paper can be like a dove flying to you with honour. The perfection can dwell to greatness, as it is known that White symbolises perfection. Honesty, this could be a big thing since you can't just throw a whole bunch of lies in your. Since you had so many colours, and were too excited, doesn't mean that you need to exaggerate the whole thing! However white can give you the chance to be honest. Cleanliness can also come in because of how white can show things way more vivid than other colours. That is how white can also mean cleanliness. Purity is also needed for writing since you can't put a whole lot of devils in your piece of paper.

Finally, I would love to admit the fact, admire it, that White is the best colour for A4, with the reasons and examples I gave. I hope you all will support my claim. Please spread this message out to others in the world, and tell them whatever I have taught you today.

GOOD LUCK MY DEAR FRIEND!
