

I had just ^{experienced} experienced the lifetime experience of entering an enchanted forest! As my first steps were invited with a cherry robin with a corn worm in its soft beak. After a while I discovered that the wild life were all cross between animal and fruit or ^{vegetable} vegetable.

It had been a while before a dark grinning shadow appeared behind my back. I turned around but the shadow ^{disappeared} disappeared and the exotic ^{wild} ~~wild~~ life had disappeared too. Then an 8 foot tall ^{stinky} Cabige gorilla quickly demolished the forest as if it were a tooth pick.

I had been panting and sprinting for hours from the start of sun set to the very end. Now making a shelter and velvety soup to eat. Before bed I turned off my lamp and I saw ^{beautiful} ~~butifal~~ apple light flys buzzing around gracefully.

By morning the wild life had finally returned and the sound of birds churping excitedly. I packed up my ^{continue} ~~be~~ longings and continued to adventer the ^{beautiful} ~~butifal~~ place. Not long after departing from my camp zone I found a idyllic patch of warm sunny grass. It had ^{Already} ~~ated~~ passed lunch so I set up ready to eat lunch.

Soon a soon after it was time to head back home

So back I went back down the hill

And carefully through the now fallen down trees up the last hill and through the silky trees back home. Then I was climbing down my tree. As the entrance was in the tree trunk like an elevator.

I've always loved nature but after this I am going to find more species of this kind. I was like it changed my heart.
