

Section 1:

#1 "When the sun was shining at 6:00, the rooster woke me up into a great vibe. I was the first one awoken on the street! I could get so much done; I could hang up the laundry, wash the dishes, get breakfast done, and so many more other things."

Strengths:

- You've created an energetic morning scene with good use of exclamation.
- Your listing of morning activities builds a clear picture of productivity.

Weakness: Redundant phrasing → The phrase "so many more other things" is repetitive. You've already established the idea of multiple tasks with your list, so the ending feels unnecessarily wordy. The phrase "great vibe" is quite vague and could be more specific about the feeling.

Exemplar: When the sun was shining at 6:00, the rooster woke me up with excitement. I was the first one awoken on the street! I could hang up the laundry, wash the dishes, prepare breakfast, and plan my day ahead.

#2 "However, the main thing was to study, I can't imagine how It will be in the actual O.C. test. I'd do so bad, but right at that moment, I teleported. All of a sudden, there were people around me."

Strengths:

- You've introduced an interesting plot twist with the teleportation.
- The mention of the O.C. test gives context to the character's concerns.

Weakness: Unclear transition → The sudden jump from studying worries to teleportation happens without warning or explanation. The reader isn't prepared for this major shift in the story. The sentence structure also needs attention as you've combined separate thoughts with commas instead of proper punctuation.

Exemplar: However, my main priority was to study for the O.C. test. I worried I might perform poorly, but before I could begin, something extraordinary happened—I teleported! All of a sudden, there were people around me.

#3 "I got my dad's wallet. So let's start spending"

Strengths:

- You've shown the character taking initiative to help others.
- The ending creates intrigue about what happens next.

Weakness: Ethical consideration → Taking the dad's wallet without permission raises ethical questions that aren't addressed. This action contradicts the noble intention of helping the homeless person and sends a confusing message about solving problems through potentially inappropriate means.

Exemplar: I asked my dad if I could use some money from his wallet for a good cause. With his permission, I was ready to start helping those in need.

■ Your story has an imaginative concept with the teleportation superpower, which shows creativity. However, the plot moves too quickly without developing important moments. Try expanding on how the character feels when they first discover their teleportation ability. What exactly happens during the teleportation? What does it feel like?

Your narrative would benefit from clearer paragraphs to separate different events in the story. Also, you could develop the homeless person as a character rather than just someone to help. What is their name? What is their story?

The ending needs more thought about consequences. Taking dad's wallet raises questions about where money comes from. Perhaps your character could earn money through chores or use their teleportation power in a clever way to help.

Additionally, consider what happens after helping one homeless person. Could your character create a longer-term plan to help more people with this amazing power?

Score: 38/50

Section 2:

When the sun was shining at 6:00, the rooster woke me up into ~~a great vibe~~ [with excitement]. I was the first one awoken on the street! I could get so much done; I could hang up the laundry, wash the dishes, get breakfast done, and ~~so many more other things~~ [plan my day ahead]. #1 ~~However, the main thing was to study, I can't imagine how It~~

~~will be in the actual O.C. test. I'd do so bad, but right at that moment, I teleported.~~
[However, my main priority was to study for the O.C. test. I worried I might perform poorly, but before I could begin, something extraordinary happened—I teleported!] #2
All of a sudden, there were people around me. There were enough chairs and desks to fit the whole of Sydney! I wanted to go back home, and at that moment, I teleported again. However, this time I was back home. I realised I had a superpower. This superpower was to teleport to wherever I think of. Now I want to help the homeless. I suddenly teleported to a sign that said. ~~Thank you for your help. Every cent means something to me.~~ [Thank you for your help. Every penny means something to me.] I was not going to give him one ~~percentage~~ [per cent] of a dollar. Instead, I'm going to give him clothes, food, and a home. ~~I got my dad's wallet. So let's start spending~~ [I asked my dad if I could use some money from his wallet for a good cause. With his permission, I was ready to start helping those in need.] #3