

Section 1:

#1 (First paragraph): Strengths:

- Effective use of vivid imagery to paint a concerning scenario
- Clear connection between the hook and thesis statement

Weaknesses: Underdeveloped scenario → Your opening scenario about children and technology feels rushed and could benefit from more specific details about how homework prevents these issues. The connection between "watching Youtube" and homework's benefits needs stronger links. Envision a concerning trend: students rushing home only to spend hours watching Youtube videos and playing video games, while their untouched schoolbooks gather dust. Without the structure of homework, these digital distractions can easily overwhelm young minds, affecting both their academic progress and social development.

#2 (Second paragraph): Strengths:

- Clear topic sentence that states the main argument
- Good use of cause-and-effect reasoning

Weaknesses: Repetitive ideas → Your paragraph repeats the idea of "reinforcing learning" without exploring deeper aspects. Phrases like "certainly very important" and "positive attitude" need more backing to strengthen your argument. Homework serves as a vital bridge between classroom learning and independent mastery. When students practise new concepts through carefully designed assignments, they transform surface understanding into deep knowledge, creating lasting connections that benefit their overall academic journey.

#3 (Fourth paragraph): Strengths:

- Good attempt to link homework to future success
- Clear topic sentence introducing the main point

Weaknesses: Vague examples → Your discussion about "projects and tasks outside designated hours" needs specific examples. The phrase "do their job and career easily" oversimplifies the complex benefits of homework. Through homework, students develop crucial workplace readiness skills. For instance, when completing a challenging maths assignment, they learn to break down complex problems and persist through difficulties - exactly the kind of approach needed in future careers.

■ Your persuasive piece shows promise but needs deeper development of ideas. The introduction grabs attention, yet you could strengthen it by directly addressing common arguments against homework. In your body paragraphs, try to give more specific examples of how homework builds particular skills. Also, your conclusion feels rushed - instead of introducing a new saying, try circling back to your opening scenario to show how homework prevents those negative outcomes. Additionally, consider adding more emotional appeal by describing how students feel when they master a difficult concept through homework practice. Your transitions between paragraphs could be smoother - try connecting each paragraph's ending to the next paragraph's beginning. Take your second paragraph about reinforcing learning and expand on exactly how homework helps with retention.

Score: 43/50

Section 2:

Envision a world ~~when~~[where] all children do when they get home from school is watch Youtube or play video games. Soon they become addicted and won't even come out to ~~hang-out~~ [spend time] with their friends anymore. When it is way past their usual bedtime, they are still wide-eyed staring at their computer, scrolling shorts. #1 Homework shouldn't be banned because they help students understand what they learn in class, it teaches valuable life skills and it prepares students for academic and professional challenges.

#2 First and foremost, homework plays a crucial role in reinforcing what students learn in class. Practice is essential for mastering new concepts, and homework provides an opportunity for students to apply what they have learned. Without homework, students may forget important material, leading to gaps in their education. ~~It also allows them not to fall behind in class resulting in a positive attitude in the room and outside as well.~~ [Regular homework completion helps students keep pace with lessons, fostering confidence both inside and outside the classroom.] Homework helps cement knowledge and build a strong foundation for future learning, which is certainly very important.

Moreover, homework teaches students valuable life skills such as responsibility, time management, and self-discipline. When students complete assignments on their own, they develop independence and problem-solving skills that will benefit them throughout their lives. Having these skills as a trait will be beneficial in different environments around them. These skills are essential for success in college and the workplace, where individuals must meet deadlines and manage their tasks effectively. That is why homework is beneficial and cannot be banned.

#3 Last but not least, homework prepares students for future academic and professional challenges. Many careers require individuals to work on projects and tasks outside of designated hours. By completing homework, students learn how to manage workloads and meet deadlines, skills that are crucial in any profession, ~~this will allow students to do their job and career easily~~ [these skills enable students to navigate their future careers more effectively]. Homework also helps students develop perseverance and resilience, which are key traits for overcoming obstacles in life. Homework definitely is essential.

All in all, ~~home~~ [homework] is a beneficial task that must not be banned. It plays a crucial role in reinforcing what students learn in class, it teaches students valuable life skills such as responsibility, time management, and self-discipline and it prepares students for future academic and professional challenges. As the old saying goes, 'Pain is for the greater good.'