

Section 1:

#1 "Imagine a world without homework, it would be challenging to live by following things and rules when you don't even know or understand anything. Well, that's where homework comes in. It will absolutely summarize, and you can remember what you have learned so it helps you stick it in your brain, and you will not forget it."

Strengths: Your opening with a hypothetical scenario effectively grabs the reader's attention. You've made a clear connection between homework and retention of knowledge.

Weaknesses: Unclear thesis statement → Your main argument is somewhat scattered across multiple ideas rather than providing a focused central claim. Several sentences run together without proper punctuation, making your opening paragraph difficult to follow.

Exemplar: Imagine a world without homework. It would be challenging to understand and follow rules when you haven't properly learnt the material. Homework helps summarise what you've learnt in class, allowing you to remember important information.

#2 "All tasks will for sure help students to develop personal creativity, because each person must be creative in some way. Just say as an example in the future when you try and get a job because every job wants at least some different and more interesting ideas or ways of thinking and different examples for a better way of presentation of the job."

Strengths: You've attempted to link homework to future career benefits, which strengthens your argument. Your point about creativity is relevant to the benefits of homework.

Weaknesses: Run-on sentences → Your ideas are jumbled together in long, confusing sentences without proper structure. The connection between homework and creativity needs more specific examples to be convincing.

Exemplar: Homework tasks help students develop personal creativity. For example, when you apply for jobs in the future, employers will value your ability to think creatively and present ideas effectively—skills that regular homework practice helps to build.

#3 "In conclusion you must always do homework it is vital it helps you summarize think about it redo it and practice what you have learnt. It will improve and develop important and great skills to your brain it will most definitely help with time management, organisation and self-discipline."

Strengths: Your conclusion restates key points about the benefits of homework. You've included important skills developed through homework.

Weaknesses: Punctuation errors → Your conclusion lacks proper punctuation, making it difficult to identify separate points. The tone becomes overly forceful without sufficient evidence to support such strong claims.

Exemplar: In conclusion, homework is vital because it helps you summarise, revise and practise what you've learnt. Completing homework regularly improves important skills like time management, organisation and self-discipline—all of which will benefit you throughout your education and beyond.

■ Your persuasive piece presents some valid points about the importance of homework, but needs more structure and development. Your arguments would be more convincing if you organised your ideas into clearer paragraphs with proper topic sentences. The introduction could benefit from a stronger thesis statement that outlines your main arguments. Additionally, your second paragraph explaining what homework is could be moved to the beginning to provide context before presenting your arguments. Your examples about creativity and exam preparation are good starting points, but need more specific details. Also, consider addressing potential counterarguments—such as homework causing stress—to make your piece more balanced. Try to vary your sentence structure more and use proper punctuation consistently throughout your writing. Using connecting words like "firstly," "furthermore," and "however" would help guide your reader through your arguments more effectively.

Score: 40/50

Section 2:

Homework should not be ~~banned~~ [banned]!

Imagine a world without homework, it would be challenging to live by following things and rules when you don't even know or understand anything. Well, that's where homework comes in. ~~It will absolutely summarize, and you can remember what you have learned so it helps you stick it in your brain, and you will not forget it.~~ [It helps you summarise what you have learnt, helping the information stick in your brain so you won't forget it.] #1 Part of it is you can practice and review in your homework book so if you ever have spare time or want to use a strategy you can always look back. Also ~~completing~~ [completing] homework helps students develop important skills such as time management, ~~organization~~ [organisation], and self-discipline. And finally regular homework can help students prepare for quizzes and exams in the future that have similar formats.

First, homework is the work that students get assigned to do at home. It will include going through the work that has already been taught at school, answering questions related to the topic as well as writing assignments to increase one's knowledge. Doing homework is very important because it helps students understand better and so you ~~summarize~~ [summarise] to help you engage and develop your creative skills.

~~All tasks will for sure help students to develop personal creativity, because each person must be creative in some way. Just say as an example in the future when you try and get a job because every job wants at least some different and more interesting ideas or ways of thinking and different examples for a better way of presentation of the job.~~ [All homework tasks help students develop personal creativity, as each person needs to be creative in some way. For example, when you apply for jobs in the future, employers will look for different and interesting ideas or ways of thinking that can improve how you present your work.] #2 There are jobs like presentations, essays, models, research, field work, diagnostics, and training workshops among others which require the development of student's mindfulness of creativity. So, homework will help you develop now and in the future.

In exams[,] if it is school exams sort of like a check in [,] then what you have learned will be in the questions ~~but, if~~ [but if] you didn't have homework, you would probably have a little bit of trouble answering the questions. But, for the people who did do their homework this is an advantage for you because you have ~~summari~~ [summarised] and ~~practiced~~ [practised]. It is vital that you must do homework [.] You can find ~~test~~ [tests] in school or out of school millions of times easier than people who don't.

~~In conclusion you must always do homework it is vital it helps you summarize think about it redo it and practice what you have learnt. It will improve and develop important~~

~~and great skills to your brain it will most definitely help with time management, organisation and self-discipline.~~ [In conclusion, you must always do homework as it is vital. It helps you summarise, think about, redo and practise what you have learnt. It will improve and develop important skills for your brain, and will most definitely help with time management, organisation and self-discipline.] #3 Finally, homework will make you find tests in the future 100% easier if you ~~practice~~ [practise] hard, it will be loads and loads of easy questions you will do homework and it should most absolutely not be banned ever!