

Section 1:

#1 "First equality, at Beijing you will feel very welcome, and you'd feel at home. People will greet you with open and wide smiles and their manners at the best. No one would ever be racists to you nope you heard me correctly. They wouldn't say anything biased nor because of your skin color, your face depending on what you look like and certainly not because of your back round."

Strengths: Your enthusiasm for creating an inclusive environment comes through clearly. You've tried to paint a welcoming picture with details about friendly people and their positive attitudes.

Weakness: Run-on sentences and unclear structure → This paragraph contains several sentences that run together without proper punctuation or clear connections. For example, "No one would ever be racists to you nope you heard me correctly" combines multiple thoughts without proper structure. The paragraph would be stronger if you organised your thoughts into distinct, well-structured sentences. People in Beijing are welcoming to everyone, regardless of appearance or background. No one experiences racism here, as I've made this a top priority in our community.

#2 "Second safety, this miraculous place is the world's top 31st safest place. Beijing will always be safe. For example, in 2022, there were 4.42 million criminal cases, the lowest in a decade. Beijing has amazing safety that you could never possibly think of. This place is one of a wonder that people want to visit partly because of all the safety that's around."

Strengths: You've included a specific statistic which adds credibility to your argument. You've also emphasised safety as an important feature of your ideal Beijing.

Weakness: Contradictory information → You mention Beijing is the "31st safest place" but then state there were "4.42 million criminal cases." This seems to contradict your claim about exceptional safety. Also, the phrase "safety that you could never possibly think of" doesn't clearly explain what makes the safety special. Beijing ranks among the world's 31 safest cities. Our crime rates have dropped significantly, making our city safer than it has been in ten years. Visitors often comment on how secure they feel while exploring our streets.

#3 "Finally, justice for our community, leading international human rights groups continue to point to widespread abuse in the country's judicial system. Beijing lets you roam freely they will most certainly not give you minimized freedom and will not say you can't do this you can't do that."

Strengths: You've attempted to address the important topic of justice and freedom, which shows you're thinking about fundamental rights in your ideal city.

Weakness: Unclear messaging → The first sentence mentions "widespread abuse" which contradicts your positive vision. The double negatives in "will not give you minimised freedom and will not say you can't do this" make your point difficult to understand. In my Beijing, justice means everyone receives fair treatment. Our legal system protects individual freedoms, allowing citizens to make their own choices without unnecessary restrictions, while still maintaining order and safety.

■ Your piece shows great enthusiasm for creating an ideal Beijing where people would want to live. You've focused on three important values: equality, safety, and justice. However, your writing could benefit from clearer organisation of ideas within each paragraph. Try starting each paragraph with a clear topic sentence that states your main point. Also, make sure all your examples and details support your main idea rather than contradicting it. For instance, when discussing safety, focus on positive statistics that show how safe Beijing is. When writing about freedom and justice, explain specifically what freedoms people have rather than using double negatives. Additionally, you could strengthen your conclusion by summarising your main points more clearly and ending with a strong final thought that leaves readers feeling inspired about your vision for Beijing.

Beijing

If I was the chosen leader for Beijing, a place where the population is 21.86 million. ~~Also, it's~~ [It's] bright and the clouds are adrift, that land of mine would be perfect. I would hold the responsibility of something even greater than power. I had a vision of equality, safety and justice for our community. This is why I will have these three laws pointed out the most.

~~#1 First equality, at Beijing you will feel very welcome, and you'd feel at home.~~ [First, equality is essential. At Beijing, you will feel very welcome and at home.] People will greet you with open and wide smiles and their manners at the best. ~~No one would ever be racists to you nope you heard me correctly.~~ [No one would ever be racist to you - yes, you heard me correctly.] ~~They wouldn't say anything biased nor because of your skin color, your face depending on what you~~

~~look like and certainly not because of your back round.~~ [People wouldn't say anything biased about your skin colour, facial features, or background.] Beijing is a just and prosperous society where all individuals have equal rights and opportunities.

~~#2 Second safety, this miraculous place is the world's top 31st safest place.~~ [Second, safety is paramount. This miraculous place is the world's 31st safest city.] Beijing will always be safe. For example, in 2022, there were 4.42 million criminal cases, the lowest in a decade. Beijing has amazing safety that you could never possibly think of. This place is one of a wonder that people want to visit partly because of all the safety that's around.

~~#3 Finally, justice for our community, leading international human rights groups continue to point to widespread abuse in the country's judicial system.~~ [Finally, justice for our community is crucial.] Beijing lets you roam freely ~~they~~ [and] will most certainly not give you minimized freedom and will not say you can't do this you can't do that.

In conclusion, Beijing is a great ~~country~~ [city] you should live in. Just think of all the equality you could get. Your safety would be in great hands. Finally, you will most absolutely get your own freedom and justice from your community. It's vital for you to come and visit here.】
