In Medias Res: Narrative Inception

Welcome to the artistry of literary disruption. Today we dissect the classical technique of in medias res—plunging readers directly into pivotal narrative moments while eschewing conventional exposition.

| "Start with the action; explain it afterwards." — Philip Pullman

Objective: Craft sophisticated narrative apertures employing temporal disruption and sensory immersion to establish immediate narrative tension.

In Medias Res: Starting with Action

- 📖 Classical storytelling technique from Horace's Art of Poetry — beginning in the middle of events instead of lengthy introductions
- 👂 Reader psychology and engagement — using flashbacks and flash-forwards to create curiosity and suspense
- 📖 Comparing with other story structures: chronological order (from the very beginning) and climax-first (starting at the most exciting part)
- 🍃 Famous examples: Dickens (David Copperfield), Pullman (Northern Lights), and Morpurgo (Private Peaceful) all begin with action

Critical Analysis:

Discuss how Philip Pullman's opening to "Northern Lights" uses multiple senses and mysterious timing to create tension.

Advanced Techniques: Powerful Sensory Writing

- ⚡ Mixed-sensory description — combining unexpected senses together (e.g., "Woolf's 'the taste of colour'") for immediate reader immersion
- 📌 Symbolic objects — using important objects to signal danger or change, creating mystery and curiosity for readers
- 🌀 Weather and mood — using environment to show feelings and tension (e.g., Dickens' fog in Bleak House)
- 💬 Mystery dialogue — starting with conversation without explaining who is speaking or where they are, making readers curious immediately

Writing Challenge:

Improve "Whirr... the classroom 3-D printer jammed and sparks flew..." by adding two advanced sensory techniques to make the scene more vivid and exciting.

Fun Fact & Flowchart: Action Hooks

Writing Wisdom:

"Start with a bang—not a yawn! Great writers begin with action because it hooks the reader's attention right away—like diving into a pool instead of walking in slowly."

—Advice from master storytellers

Action Story Planning Steps:

1. Choose an exciting moment for your opening

2. Include powerful sensory details (what we see, hear, feel)

3. Use strong action words and varied sentences

4. Add clues about what happened before or will happen next

A dramatic moment captured: The perfect starting point for an exciting story!

Poor Exemplar: What's Weak?

“ "In our classroom, we have a 3-D printer. Sometimes it breaks. One day it stopped working."

Analysis:

- ✗ Lacks action — tells rather than shows
- ✗ No details or suspense — fails to engage reader
- ✗ Feels slow and flat — monotonous sentences

Why This Writing Doesn't Work

“In our classroom, we have a 3-D printer. Sometimes it breaks. One day it stopped working.”

Critical Analysis:

- ✖ Missing sensory details — fails to immerse the reader through engaging descriptions
- ✖ Repetitive sentence structure — lacks variety and rhythm in how sentences are crafted
- ✖ Too chronological — starts from the beginning rather than jumping into an exciting moment

Turn-and-talk: 45 seconds

How could you rewrite this using vivid details and starting at the most exciting moment?

Advanced Narrative Writing

Improved Exemplar—What's Better?

“Without warning, the 3-D printer spluttered and the lights flickered. The teacher rushed forward as a burning smell curled into the air.”

- ✓ Shows action happening
- ✓ Uses sensory details

Levelling Up Your Story Openings

Writer's Wisdom:

"When readers start in the middle of an exciting scene, they become curious about what happened before and eager to discover what happens next. This creates a special kind of reading pleasure!"

—Advice from award-winning children's authors

Story Opening Strategy:

1. Find the most exciting moment of tension in your story

2. Add vivid descriptions that engage multiple senses

3. Show how characters react through actions and dialogue

4. Hint at what happened before to create mystery

Critical Practice:

Analyze your story opening for these elements:

- Time (when the story begins)
- Pacing (how quickly events happen)
- Details (what you choose to show)
- Perspective (who tells the story)

Thinking Timer

3 minutes to plan your exciting story opening

Model Exemplar—Narrative Excellence

“Whirr... Metal shuddered and a flash of orange burst from the printer. Chairs scraped as pupils leapt back. 'Everyone out!' shouted Miss Clarke, her voice almost lost beneath a spray of sparks.”

Narrative Analysis:

- ★ Sensorial hypotyposis — vivid depiction through onomatopoeia ("Whirr") and chromatic imagery ("flash of orange")
- ★ Metaleptic tension — rapid shift from object to characters creates narrative urgency
- ★ Aural synaesthesia — layered soundscape ("chairs scraped," "voice almost lost")

Critical Analysis:

Examine the interplay between character agency and environmental threat. How does the author employ kinetic language to establish narrative momentum?

Model Exemplar—Deep Dive Analysis

Narrative Technique Analysis:

- Sound imagery opening: "Whirr..." creates sound effect technique and immediate action
- Vivid description: "flash of orange burst" provides specific visual detail with precise colour choice
- Indirect characterisation: "Chairs scraped" shows physical movement revealing emotion
- Character speech: Creates perspective shift to authoritative voice
- Trailing image: Final detail creates space for reader imagination

Advanced Technique Analysis:

Present Tense Action

Verbs create "here-and-now" feeling

Multi-sensory Details

Visual, sound, and movement combined

Sentence Structure

Short, powerful patterns create rhythm

Emotional Engagement

Reader feels the urgency and danger

Critical inquiry: Analyse how this extract creates a sense of time speeding up through the ratio of actions to words. Which sentences feel fastest and why?

Advanced Technique Toolbox: Mastering In Medias Res

- ⚡ Sensory Symphony — Orchestrate multiple senses simultaneously (sight, sound, touch, smell) to create immersive narrative beginnings
- ⌚ Temporal Architecture — Deliberate manipulation of time through sentence length variation; short, punchy sentences for urgency followed by longer, flowing ones
- 💬 Dialogue Integration — Embed character speech without introduction, as exemplified in Michael Morpurgo's *War Horse*
- ♥ Emotional Geography — Map physical reactions that reveal internal states (racing hearts, held breath) without directly naming emotions
- ✍️ Setting Disruption — Establish normality then immediately subvert it through unexpected environmental changes or intrusions

Application Challenge:

✍️ Select two techniques from the toolbox and incorporate them into your next narrative opening. Annotate with arrows to identify which techniques you've employed.

Strategy Flowchart & Literary Insight

Literary Insight:

"Roald Dahl rewrote the opening to 'Charlie and the Chocolate Factory' 15 times to perfect his in medias res technique!"

Action Opening Mastery Path:

1. Identify climactic moment or tension point

2. Create multi-sensory description (sound, sight, feeling)

3. Include character reactions through dialogue & movement

4. Create narrative questions (subtle mysteries) for the reader

Timed Challenge

Map your action opening:

Using the flowchart, plan an opening for this scenario: "A mysterious object appears in the school playground."

3:00
minutes

Advanced Tip:

Mix sentence lengths for rhythm—start with a short, punchy sentence followed by descriptive elaboration.

Practice Challenge: Powerful Story Beginnings

Your Challenge: Craft an action-packed opening

“ "Buzz... Suddenly, the classroom lights flickered and the robot on the desk began to move on its own."

- Include: Sensory details & exciting tension
- Add: Character reactions & setting details
- Use: Different sentence types for effect

Timed Writing:
3 minutes to craft your opening paragraph

💡 Literary Goal: Create a story hook with unexpected technology

The classroom robot activating unexpectedly

Model Exemplar—Fully Annotated

Analysis: In Medias Res Excellence

"Whirr... Metal shuddered and a flash of orange burst from the printer. Chairs scraped as pupils leapt back. 'Everyone out!' shouted Miss Clarke, her voice almost lost beneath a spray of sparks."

Sound imagery — Onomatopoeia creates immediate sensory engagement

Character reaction — Physical responses reveal emotion without telling

Vivid action — Strong verbs (shuddered, burst) create dynamic scene

Dialogue integration — Speech reveals urgency and character

Advanced techniques implemented:

- ✓ Varied sentence structure
- ✓ Precise vocabulary

- ✓ Multi-sensory details
- ✓ Emotional engagement

Start in the Action

Whirr... the classroom.
3-JD printer jammed and sparks flee...

"When readers remember your story, they remember its beginning and end most vividly!" — Philip Pullman

Final Challenge:

Select one technique from the annotated exemplar and incorporate it into your own revised opening paragraph. Highlight your technique with a coloured pen!
