

Bob was in the car with his mother. They were moving to Rochester because it was the only place they could afford a house in. Bob was not very supportive with the idea of moving houses but he was sure he was going to make lots of friends there. His courage heart and his knowledgeable brain were going to carry him forward through his journey at Rochester public school. As soon as Bob reached his new house he jumped out of the car all to see how small the house was. His heart felt like it got punched in the chest. Bob knew this was the only house that they could afford. He looked up looking forward to going to his new school as he carried his luggage to his bedroom. The next day he was packing his backpack for school. Bob quickly finished his breakfast and left for school. Waaa waaaaaa!!!!!! The sound of a little kid crying melted his heart. Bob saw a little boy crying on the floor begging some big kids who were three times his size for his lunch money back. He knew that he had to stand up for the little kids but the bullies were twice Bob's size. He knew he had to try beat the bullies and teach them a lesson. Bob walked up to the two people and said leave that kid alone. The bullies laughed at Bob and said you can not hurt us because we are twice your size. Bob got so angry he pulled out his fist and punched the bullies in the face and they went flying ten meters back. The bullies were so shocked they ran away and swore never to bully someone again. After that the little kid told the principle that Bob stopped the bullies that were bullying him. The principle was so amazed that he held a assembly to honor Bob. After that Bob was making a lot of friends and was very happy despite he had a very small house.
