

Section 1

#1: Opening paragraph

"Have you ever wondered what it was like to have a reading club at school? I strongly believe that supporting a imagination lab is essential as, students will improve their academic progress and will have a time of serenity."

Strengths:

- Your opening question engages readers immediately and makes them think about the topic
- You clearly state your position on imagination labs

Weak introduction of the main idea

→ Your opening moves too quickly from a question about reading clubs to discussing "imagination labs" without explaining what an imagination lab actually is or how it differs from a reading club. This creates confusion for your reader. The phrase "supporting a imagination lab" also needs the article "an" instead of "a," and the comma after "as" breaks up the sentence awkwardly.

Exemplar: Have you ever wondered what it would be like to have an imagination lab at school? An imagination lab is a quiet space where students can read, explore stories, and let their creativity flourish. I strongly believe that supporting an imagination lab is essential because students will improve their academic progress and experience valuable moments of calm.

#2: Second paragraph

"To begin with, it is vital for schools to support imagination labs as children will enhance their grades. They will improve their word knowledge. As they meet new words, they will infer the meaning but when it pops up more frequently, students will memorise it and understand it more."

Strengths:

- You provide a logical reason for having imagination labs (improving grades)

- You explain the process of how students learn new vocabulary

Underdeveloped reasoning

→ Your explanation of how imagination labs improve grades focuses only on vocabulary building, which is quite narrow. The connection between "enhance their grades" and learning new words isn't fully explained—which subjects improve? How much improvement might occur? The short sentences like "They will improve their word knowledge" feel choppy and could be combined with the following ideas to create smoother, more sophisticated writing.

Exemplar: To begin with, it is vital for schools to support imagination labs because children will enhance their academic performance across multiple subjects. When students engage with diverse texts, they encounter unfamiliar vocabulary and learn to infer meanings from context. As these words appear repeatedly in their reading, students naturally memorise and understand them, which strengthens their comprehension in English, humanities, and even science.

#3: Third paragraph

"Additionally, students will normally want tranquil environment as they have had too much chaos on the playgrounds. This is a perfect place for kids to relax. Calming down and taking a rest is essential for human beings."

Strengths:

- You recognise the importance of quiet spaces for students
- You connect the need for calm to students' daily experiences at school

Vague generalisation without specific support

→ The claim that students "have had too much chaos on the playgrounds" assumes all students feel overwhelmed by playground activity, but some students thrive in active environments. Your writing would be stronger if you explained why tranquillity matters for learning specifically, rather than just stating that rest is "essential for human beings," which is too broad. The phrase "want tranquil environment" is also missing the article "a."

Exemplar: Additionally, students benefit from having a tranquil environment where they can recharge during the school day. After energetic playground activities or challenging lessons, many children need a calm space to reset their minds. Research shows that quiet reading time helps students manage stress and improves their concentration for afternoon classes, making imagination labs valuable for both wellbeing and academic focus.

■ Your piece presents a clear position supporting imagination labs at school, and you've organised your thoughts into distinct paragraphs with reasons. However, your argument would benefit from deeper development in several areas. Currently, your body paragraphs offer quite general statements—"enhance their grades" and "essential for human beings"—without explaining the specific connections to imagination labs or providing concrete examples that would convince your reader.

To strengthen your content, focus on expanding each reason with more precise details. For instance, in your vocabulary paragraph, you could mention specific types of books students might read or explain how improved vocabulary helps in particular school subjects. In your tranquillity paragraph, instead of broadly stating that rest is essential, describe what students actually do in an imagination lab and how this specific activity helps their learning.

Additionally, your conclusion feels rushed. Rather than simply telling readers to "write a letter to the principal now," you could summarise your strongest points and leave your reader with a memorable final thought about why imagination labs matter. Also, ensure you're using consistent terminology throughout—you shift between "reading club" and "imagination lab" without clarifying whether these are the same thing.

Finally, work on sentence variety and flow. Some of your sentences are quite short and choppy ("They will improve their word knowledge. This is a perfect place for kids to relax."), whilst others run on without proper punctuation. Combining related ideas and using connecting words will make your writing feel more mature and easier to follow.

Score: 39/50

Section 2

~~Have you ever wondered what it was like~~ [Have you ever wondered what it would be like] to have a reading club at school? I strongly believe that supporting ~~a imagination~~ [an imagination] lab is essential ~~as,~~ [because] students will improve their academic progress and will have ~~a time~~ [moments] of serenity.

~~#1 To begin with, it is vital for schools to support imagination labs as children will enhance their grades. They will improve their word knowledge. As they meet new words, they will infer the meaning but when it pops up more frequently, students will memorise it and understand it more.~~ [To begin with, it is vital for schools to support imagination labs because children will enhance their academic performance. When students engage with diverse texts, they encounter unfamiliar vocabulary and learn to infer meanings from context. As these words appear repeatedly in their reading, students naturally memorise and comprehend them, which strengthens their skills across multiple subjects.] Hence, every school should have ~~a imagination~~ [an imagination] club.

~~#2 Additionally, students will normally want tranquil environment as they have had too much chaos on the playgrounds. This is a perfect place for kids to relax.~~ [Additionally, students benefit from having a tranquil environment where they can recharge after energetic playground activities or challenging lessons. Imagination labs provide the perfect place for children to relax and reset their minds.] Calming down and taking a rest is essential for ~~human beings~~ [student wellbeing and concentration]. People say that there is no point ~~of~~ [in] having a rest. ~~Although you don't need it most people want it so children should still take rests.~~ [Whilst some might argue that students don't need designated quiet time, many children benefit greatly from these peaceful moments during their busy school day.] ~~#3~~ Therefore, ~~people must have~~ [schools should provide] a tranquil environment.

Ultimately, all schools should support imagination labs as many reasons support ~~it~~ [this initiative]. So, go write a letter to the principal now!